I Married a Witch: A wacky comedy from the 1940s. This screwball witch comedy from France is a classic. The movie is based on the book The Passionate Witch by Thorne Smith, and the plot is about a witch trying to take revenge against the descendant of a Salem Puritan bloodline that once wrecked her witch heritage. Instead of taking revenge, though, she starts to fall in love, and hilarity ensures.

Montauk, New York, isn't even a town. It's technically a hamlet (which is a community that's smaller than a village, or that doesn't have a church) with a population of 3,326 as of 2010. It's the perfect place for Camp Hero, which would supposedly house a secret military installation which would delve into time travel, teleportation, psychic warfare, and object creation research.
